

Brooke L. Brown
Founder & Director

B.S., Early Childhood Education
University of Vermont, 1997

Many in early childhood education ascribe to the Reggio Emilia Approach. Brooke Brown has actually visited the remarkable Italian city that is its namesake.

Inspired by seeing this child-centered and teacher-supported approach in practice — in addition to several years of teaching in Massachusetts and Vermont — Brooke felt the timing was right to establish her own early childhood education center.

As a kindergarten teacher, Brooke has engaged herself in every aspect of the profession — developing assessment tools, supporting an emergent curriculum, working closely with parent co-op boards, and pursuing multiple perspectives.

In addition to being the logical evolution of her career, Learning Brooke is the realization of a long-cherished goal.
